A PLEA FOR TIGERS AND LIONS .- In a re cent Portuguese book of African travel noticed in the Academy, the reviewer states that it is curious that the character given by Senhor Neres of the African elephant almost coincides with that given nearly contemporaneously by Mr. Sanderson of the Indian elephant. According to Senhor Neres, the African elephant is inoffensive, timid, and hardly ever aggressive, even in self-defence. Though there is a certain evident risk in the pursuit of an animal of such huge size and power, Senhor Neres pronounces the stories of peril and fatal mishaps as told by too many elephant-hunters to be mostly fables, and the sport of elephant-shooting is clearly no better than butchery. There is nothing in his ac count of the animal against the feasibility of the recent proposals which have been made to tame the African elephant and utilize it in the exploration and exploitation of tropical Africa.

It is another coincidence between the habits of the feræ naturæ of two great continents that what has been alleged in mitigation of the popular sentence upon the tiger of India is likewise claimed for the African lion. The tiger-hunters of India plead for their quarry that in pursuing deer and other animals destructive to the peasant's crops it does bim and the state a positive benefit, and should, therefore, not be destroyed as vermin; it is only, they say, the old tigers or those made infirm by disease which, too feeble to follow their natural game, take to cattle-killing or prey on man. Senbor Neres says what is nearly equivalent of the lions of Southern Africa. They serve the useful purpose of checking the multiplication of the teeming herds in the plain country; only those which no longer possess speed enough to overtake the wild deer and gnus and antelopes attack the farmer's corral, pulling down the palings which form it, and carrying off an ox or two from the berd within .- Editor's Scientific Records, in Harper's Magazine for February.

A touching begging story with a good meral is told by the Pittsburgh Telegraph. A young man who had been on a threedays' debauch wandered into the readingroom of a hotel, where he was well known, sat down, and stared moodily into the street. Presently a little girl of about ten years came in and looked timidly about the room. She was dressed in rags, but she had a sweet, intelligent face that could scarcely fail to excite sympathy. There were five persons in the room, and she went to each begging. One gentleman gave her a five-cent piece, and she then went to the gentleman spoken of and asked him for a penny, adding, "I baven't had anything to eat for a whole day." The gentleman was out of humor, and he said crossly, "Don't bother me; go away; I haven't had any thing to eat for three days." The child opened her eyes in shy wonder and stared at him for a moment, and then she walked slowly toward the door. She turned the knob, and then, after hesitating a few seconds, walked up to him, and, gently laying the five cents she bad received on his knee, said, with a tone of true girlish pity in her voice : "If you haven't had anything to eat for three days, you take this and go and buy some bread. Perhaps I can get some more somewhere." The young fellow blushed to the roots of his bair, and lifting the Sister of Charity in his arms, kissed her two or three times in delight. Then he took her to the persons in the room, and to those in the corridors and the office, and told the story and asked contributions, giving himself all the money he had with succeeded in raising over $40, and sent the little one on her way rejoicing.

POLYGAMY AND PORRIDGE.-When we made an excursion in Southern Utah not long ago we were hospitably entertained by the Mormon bishop at Richfield. He was a Scotchman, and bad been brought up a rigid Presbyterian. "Ab, well," said he, "they think ill of me at home for changing my religion; but there was my brother Aleck who took it most to heart. He was on his way last year to California, and turned off the road a bit to see me. and try like. Poor Aleck! he looked all over the table, and then turned upon me his sorrow-Jamie, mon! did I ever think it would ful face, blurting out, 'Oh, Jamie, mon! come to this? I could hae forgien ye a' yer poleegamy, but hae ye gien up yer par-ritch?"—Editor's Drawer, in Harper's Magazine for February.
